Once each decade the spotlight shines on the tiny Bavarian hamlet of Oberammergau, illuminating its devotion to a centuries-old tradition.

By the summer of 1633, nearly 100 people in the small village had died as the Black Plague continued its ravaging sweep through Europe. In a desperate attempt to isolate themselves, the people of Oberammergau blocked the entrances of their town. But a homesick villager slipped past the “guards” to rejoin his family. Unfortunately, he brought the dreaded infection with him. Within three days he was dead and Oberammergau was no longer free of the plague.

The villagers pleaded with God, pledging to perform a re-enactment of the passion of Jesus if God would save the town. The deaths stopped and, since that day, the villagers have stepped on stage once every ten years. Today, the play is presented with the same love, reverence and devotion in which the vow was made.

The town’s people produce and star in a theatrical production of the passion of Christ. The performance reflects centuries-old traditions in costumes, casting and staging. Only natives or those who have lived in the town for 20 years are eligible for audition. To add to the play’s authenticity, no wigs or make-up are allowed. Cast members grow their hair and beards to match their Biblical roles.

The first play was performed in 1634 in the choir loft of the church. Due to its popularity, the play was moved to the church yard and then to a nearby field where, in 1930, the modern theatre was built. Seating 5000, the theatre has an open stage and natural backdrop of blue sky and mountains.

The all-day play is performed in German. The music and costumes are magnificent. The Oberammergau Passion Play is an unforgettable experience and draws visitors from around the globe.

Your Journey

Oberammergau Passion Play

A thankful village promised God -- now that the Black Plague had left their small village -- they would show their gratitude by putting on a Passion Play. And to ensure future generations would always remember, they vowed to do the play every decade. Over 370 years later, you will watch a one-of-a-kind spectacular. The Oberammergau Passion Play is a 6-hour musical and dramatic performance that every Christian should see.

Passion Play Option

Your Optional Passion Play Ticket will include a seat at the historic Passion Play and motorcoach transfer to and from Oberammergau. In addition, your dinner on this night is also provided.

The exact day you see the play may vary from what is printed in this brochure as the availability of play tickets varies daily.
